

Ohio Association of Gerontology and Education

The Ohio Association of Gerontology and Education developed this resource for students, professionals, and educators who are interested in gerontological education opportunities in Ohio. The programs are organized by type, and include, at the undergraduate level, separate listings for majors, minors, certificates, and concentrations. Graduate-level programs include master's degrees, doctoral degrees, certificates and concentrations. The listings for long-term care administration include undergraduate and graduate programs. Each entry includes contact information as well as a direct link for further information about the program.

Program entries were updated in early 2013. We did our best to accurately represent include all educational programs in gerontology throughout the state, and to provide accurate information. Our goal is to keep this directory current, so as changes in the programs are made or errors and/or omissions are noticed, please provide us with updated information. We hope that you find this to be a useful resource.

The only national membership organization devoted primarily to gerontological education, the Association for Gerontology in Higher Education (AGHE) is in a unique position to develop and sponsor education and training initiatives and to involve students, educators, researchers, and officials from across the country in providing resources for older adults and for those who serve them. Member institutions of AGHE have this icon affixed next to the program entry. For more information, please visit <http://www.aghe.org/>

This icon appears with several institutions in the directory. Its appearance indicates that the institution supports a local chapter of Sigma Phi Omega, the National Honor Society formed in 1980 to recognize the excellence of those who study gerontology/aging, as well as of the professional aging service personnel.
